ABOUT THE ARTIST

Eizo Sakata (Aichi, Japan, 1954) is a painter and performance artist who lives and works in Paris. Originally a student of mathematical engineering at the University of Tokyo, Sakata committed to his childhood love of painting in 1983, moving to France to explore his passion. His art has evolved from his initial style of personally expressive painting; he now seeks to incorporate nature, the environment, and people in an approach he calls "Active Passivity". Water also runs thematically throughout Sakata's paintings, as evidenced literally by his use of seawater and Chinese ink. His works have been shown at Galerie 89, Paris, France, (2014); L-Gallery, Nagoya, Japan (2007, 2012); Galerie Art Base, Brussels (2006).
